

James Ted Sutter

Vice-President
Grain and Oilseed Supply Chain, North America
Cargill, Incorporated

Jim Sutter is Vice-President, Cargill Grain and Oilseed Supply Chain, North America. Jim has day-to-day responsibility for Cargill's oilseed operations in Iowa and also represents Cargill on several national Boards such as the National Oilseed Processors Association and Qualisoy, where he is currently Chairman of the Board.

Prior to moving to Iowa Sutter held management positions within Cargill in Chicago, Malaysia, England, Singapore, and Holland. He has represented Cargill on many trade association bodies and has worked on numerous efforts to enhance free trade throughout the world in agricultural products.

Jim joined Cargill's Flax and Sunflower Processing Division as a merchant trainee in Fargo, N.D. in 1980. Sutter was named a Vice-President of Cargill's North American Oilseed business in 1998.

Sutter received a bachelor's degree in Agricultural Business at Colorado State University in 1980 after growing up on a farm and cattle feeding operation in northeastern Colorado. Jim and his wife Kim live in West Des Moines, Iowa.
